

Invitation to

4TH FOUNDATIONS OF OPEN MEDIA SOFTWARE

Developer Workshop

January 13-15, 2010
Wellington, New Zealand
<http://www.foms-workshop.org/>

What is it?

Open media is a movement to promote free expression, interaction, and innovation in online video and audio.

FOMS is a task-oriented developer meeting. At FOMS, developers of open media software gather to collaborate on code and plan future technology to enable a future of open media.

Who should attend?

Individuals and organisations that work on and with open audio and video software, specifications, and installations. FOMS is a unique forum in which to talk with like-minded individuals about common problems and attack and solve them.

A few of the projects that have come out of FOMS past are improvements to liboggplay, including its Dirac support, the start of libsydneyaudio, the encouragement of ffmpeg releases, approaches toward patents, improvements to cortado, and more.

Sponsorship opportunities

FOMS is sponsored by organizations that understand the value that the tireless work of open source software developers creates and which is the core enabler of the changes that lie ahead leading us into a more participatory culture.
